AND FREIGHT. Judgment was delivered in this suit by his lordship this morning, but as it is too lengthy for insertion in this issue we confine ourselves to a summary of the statement of the case and the finding, which was in favour of the plaintiffs,

with costs, as follows :--

This was a suit for salvage instituted by the Scottish Oriental Steamship Company against the owners of the German steamer Rio for $20,000 salvage money. The facts of the case, briefly stated, are that the Scottish Oriental Steamship Company's Hongkong-Bangkok liner Phra Chom Klao Captain Fowler, arrived here on the 15t September with the German steamer Rio, 1,222 tons, Captain Davidson, in tow. The Rio left Salgon on the 6th September, with a full cargo of rice and 800 Chinese passengers, bound for Hongkong. All went well until the 8th September when at 4 a.m. her shaft snapped in two causing the stern tube to immediately break in several pieces. The yearel was then in lat 14.15 deg. north and long. 110.3 deg. cast. EPIDEMIC AT AMOY. Under date the 7th instant the Chiangchinfu correspondent of our Shanghal morning contemporary referred to a serious epidemic then much in evidence in Amoy and neighbourhood in the following terms :- "A serious epidemic, similar in nature to the Hongkong plague is undoubtedly raging in Amoy, and large numbers have already died. Being cooler weather, it is not of as virulent a type as the Hongkong malady, and let us trust that as winter comes on it may pass away. Amoy is, however, such an abnormally dirty city that the wonder is there is not always some epidemic or other to carry off the filling the air for the last few days, but we doubt overcrowded and heedless inhabitants. In the that there is much truth in them; there are country districts all around here, too, a great several incidents which make us believe that no deal of malaria is prevalent, so much so that in settlement has yet taken place between China many villages the autumn crops, already over- and Japan. It appears that the Taotal and all ripe, have been delayed in the reaping, and the the Yamen Officials here sent their wives and unusual sight is to be seen of small-footed families down south by the Tungchow on the women working along with the men resping and inst., which is significant. and thresbing."

THE WAR IN THE NORTH.

SHANGHAL Dicember 12th.

It is officially asserted that the Chinese troops have made a successful stand against the far as we can gather the Japanese squadron (16 spanese at Motlenling. Upon taking over in the Valor naval engagement. It is intended the seals of office tast month, he had to satisfy himself with temporary quarters at the official inn at Nanking, owing to his predecessor's family being still in the yamen. They have now returned to Husan and the old yamin-which during the Taiping rebellion was a portion of the palace of the Taiping Chief, Tien Wang-having been whitewashed and renovated to suit the taste of the new Vicercy, the 3rd instant was chosen as an auspicious day for the occupation. which was celebrated with some pomp.

In response to secret instructions of the Vicercy Chang, at Nanking, the chektien of the adjoining district of Nanhul (Nayway) has arrested several tice dealers of that city accused of having sold rice to Japanese sgents. It is said that the rice in question was transported to the coast, which is near Nanhal city, and then shipped into fishing junks and carried to some Japanese agents walting at certain spots and impossible to ignore the present juncture, on the coast previously sereed upon. inducement to supply the enemy is said to be and especially those with sinister designs, look a premium of fifty dollar cents per picul, new army. By a decree of the 6th Instant Kang YI, ex-Governor of Kuangtung, who went up to Peking last September, being one of the high provincial officers chosen to dengratulate the Empress-Dowager personally on her birthday anniversary last month, has been appointed Junior Vica-President of the Board of Ritte The new Vice-President is a Manchu and was Governor of this province about six years ago. He must have quite taken the fancy of the Emperor for shortly after arriving at P. king, Kang Yi was accorded several interviews, and was made a member of the Grand, or Supreme, Council of State, an adviser on military matters to the Throne, the intention being to retain him at Peking-an bonour, indeed, but not quite satisfactory to the pockets of the recipient.

Some two thousand men, newly raised in Anhul province by the agents of H.E. Li Hanchang, Viceroy of the two Kuang, passed through Nanch'angle, the capital of Klangsl, last week, on their way overland to Canton. Three thousand more are shortly to follow for the same destination to reinforce the Viceroy's troops

From the capital of Kinngsi also comes news that the Governor, To Hsing, has issued a proclamation, in view of the military provincial examinations there recently, inviting military licentiates to form themselves into battalions, who shall pay special attention to efficiency in foreign drills, in sharpshooting, and artillery practice. All old customs such as competitions with the bow and arrow, heavy weights, etc., are to be discarded entirely. Except in one case, this is the first time that a Governor has openly advocated the superiority of the new system of foreign drill to the effete one of the bow and arrow, the exception being the late Viceroy of Nanking, Shen Pac-chen, who memorialised the Throne in the seventies,' asking that the competition of the bow and arrow at the military examinations should be entirely done away with and efficiency with the sift; and knowledge of foreign drill rendered a sine and non amongst competitors for military degrees. This memorial was referred to the Boards, whose crass ignorance naturally quashed it without delay, the Empress Downg'r (Regen') being advised not to attempt to change the system which had been handed down by the dynamic ancestors? The precent Governor of Kinngsi is now trying the late Shen Pan-chen's plan but evidently wishes to form his battalions first as living evidence of super!ority, before memorialising the Throne upon the subject. We trust for the future good of China that Governor Te's example will be followed by ble brother Governors and the Viceroys, as this will bring a better class of men into the army and will tend to make military competitions popular amongst the people and also turn the military reademies at Nanking and Tientsin into the preparatories for candidates for military degrees.

There are reported to be quite a number of ex-Chinese efficers of the Sheng and other divisions, defeated at Pingyang, Chiullencheng, etc., now with the Japanese armies. The prisoners of war taken by the Japanese have been formed into battalions, who act as guides and advanced corps against their own countrymen. The prisoners now in Japan are those who refused to join the enemy against their own country, and so have been consigned to captivity in a Dai Nippon. This is retributive justice and should recall to the Manchus the last days of the previous Ming dynasty.—Chinese Cos. of N. C. Dally News.

It was generally believed that the Japanese, after having taken Port Arthur, would at once proceed to Wel-bal-wei, and some people had already fixed the date for the landing of the Japanese troops. So far, however, no Japanese forces have ventured over this way, but on the contrary they are still going further north. As

The Japanese force in Chemulpo consists at present of 100 men, while 500 soldiers are stationed at Secol. Transports on their way to Ta-lienwan Bay, etc., call daily at Chemulpo, but bring very few stores for that place, taking the gross of their cargo on to the north. (FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT) Cheloo, December 3rd. All sorts of rumours have been affost the last few days, ever since the fall of Port Arthur. At first we had new reports concerning the battle at Port Arthur, around which all interest centered; then it turned to the next place of attack. seemed that Wel-hal-wel would be next attacked and some of the Japanese flect was seen outside, and disappeared. Chinese troops have been marching in that direction to reinforce the place, though in all probability, if an attack should be made, it would be made by land. Then came reports of an armistice. What we knew definitely was that Mr. Detring and Mr Michie had gone from Tientsia to Kobe in order to confer with the Japanese. At the same time we knew that Japin had informed the United States Minister that If China herself sued for peace, she would negotiate. However, not hearing that the Chinese Emreror has appointed anyone of high rank the notion of peace has fallen through.

Now the report is that Japan will make an attack on Shan-hai-kwan. Some of her transports have been seen moving north-west in the Liao-tung Gulf, and a few ships are reported moving out of Po:t Arthur, This would indicate that Shan-hai-kwan would be the next point of attack.

The Foreign residents are beginning to see the importance of defending the Settlement against the disbanded troops of China. The Chinese have been in an awful fright and they look so'ely to the Foreigners to secure safety. As the season closes North, we are left in uncertainty. Very fortunately we will not be left to seclusion from the South.

There is no war news to report, and I reget that you should throw a doubt on my information about the atrocitles committed by the Japanese. but they are nevertheless true. Villagers, shopkeepers, and merchants were ruthlessly shot down; shops were broken open, the contents of which were emptied into the road, and mer women and even children were cut through with swords! I should be only too glad if I could have reported otherwise, but alast this is only too true, and in time it will reach you from other channels.

The Bayard, Alger, Kreysser and Baltimore are in port: The Moles is away on a short cruise, and the Dophne left yesterday for Chemulpo, to relieve the Archer, which latter vessel proceeds to Hangkony to be re-commissioned. The Portoise is to winter here.

Mrs. O'Conor, the wife of the British Minister children and maid, have left for Peking. The Chinese are quieter, but still afraid of the descring soldiers, - Shanehal Mercury.

A "TIGHT PLACE!"

Alone-as a will coman-on Dire Island ! didn't like it. I was young. I had never taken human life. My Archipelagian experience had lain bitheric amongst the Malaysian perplesreserved and poncilious. This sub-Papuan race, demonstrative and vociferous, I didn't under tend, and didn't trust.

It was all very well in Ponderjohn's company His reputation as a wizard was as leguard enough But now he was gone-off to Lukel with Yankee trader who had told him about a strange

Well, I didn't suppose my life was in much danger over his confounded beetles, but there were other things Turnira might take a fancy to, and about Mr. Tumora's disposition Ponderjohn and myself hadn't agreed. Your ethnologist, as a rule, is a bad general physiognomist. accustomed is he to look for race-indications that he becomes more or less incapable of individual differentiation.

"Just the average Matabello-islander,"Ponderjohn said. "No better than the rest of them, and no worse." I thought be was a good deal worse; and now, as I saw him sauntering over through through the sago-tree, I stowed the rifle and one revolver away in a corner, covered over with an atab. The other pistol I loaded and put in my breast-pocket. Tumora came in-through the roof! Dine houses are all roof, and the door is, perforce, in the slope of the thatch. The chief looked all around. At the birds, the snakes, the insectcases, the taxidermic implements on the little table. These things impressed him; they were the wizard's! But the wizard was away ! so Tumora looked next at me, and wasn's Impressed-a slight five-feet-nine to his burly six-one. He smiled- with childish vanity, and straightened himself up in front of me-a portentous figure, with such mass of muscle upon shoulder and arm as even a potbelly could not render insignificant. His friszy hair and beard were Papuan, pure, and, though his skin had hardly more than Malay depth of tint, his blg, drop-ended nose again was Papuan. Malay enough to carry a kris-the hardwood club was clearly his accustomed weapon. Nearly four feet long, with a head like a decent-sized pumpkin-I found myself wondering whether I could shoot before it could reach The chief followed my look and hove the thing suddenly above his head. To and fro he shook it with one hand, twisted and twirled it this way and that, till his big biceps stood nearly in a semi-circle, and I realised that I would have about as much chance with him as a fly ! But all I said was-

"That is nothing ! The infantine Papuan nature showed up. on all imports hitherto admitted free of duty. With a pettish grin be let the club drop. Then be squatted on the floor and laughed. "Would I give him rum?"

without misgivings, "Would I show him my guns ?" " My guns were gone with my 'father' to Lukel." That, my visitor frankly observed, was a lie I and as frankly I acknowledged it. Then we both laughed, and things began to look more promising. I offered the quarter-pound cake of such tobacco as I had seen the Ke men smoke-black as ink and strong as a team of bullocks. He smelt | have been sold by a Frankfort collector to a at it in a puzzled kind of way, then stowed it Leipeic amateur for the sum of $3,500. away in his hair. Next, of course, he was hungry, so I gave him sago-cakes and diled turtle-balf-a-dozen of the one and about a pound of the other-and the way it all disappeared made me thankiul be hadn't brought with him a "tail" of similar performers. The thought suggested the question-why had he come alone? "Because"-peerly g cautiously round and sinking his guttural voice to a whisper-" because he wanted to see the Weather-Spirit."

"The Weather-Spirit !" "Ay, the little devil fastened in a box-that tells thy 'father' what wind is going to blow, and only point. This was its finger," Tumora scratched his head, felt the lump of tobacco in his hair, drew it out, bit off a mouthful, and swallowed the horrible stuff as if & had been gingerbread :.

Here was a fresh complication. This sort of thing would polson a thinoceros! If Tumora died-well, Ponderjohn had described to me a few of the little amenities practised upon unfortunates who were merely suspected of harming a chief. I tried to explain to the animal that tobacco was to be smoked not exten, and for answer he grinned and took another mouthful. Then be cautiously approached the barometerlooked hard at the index for a few momentssuddenly swung up his club sgain, and delivered himself in execrable Malay to the effect that I was an unworthy son of my " father," who spoke always truth ! In short, I was a liar of the first water ! "The spirit could speak, and if wouldn't ask it to do so "-the impending club said the rest ! Should I shoot him, out-of-hand? The time was to come-soon enough-when I would have dropped him without a wink, but I had never yet fired at Man! The momentousness of the act held my hand and I temporised. "I would ask the spirit to speak," I said. "But, as Tumora de abtless knew, spirits were occasionally "----"Goon! "he snarled. "Go on I make the spirit say wise words ! " His deep-set eye began to burn ; his teeth gleamed viciously from the gloomy tangle of his beard; but the sweat-beads stood upon his scrollmarked forehead, his breath came in snorts, the brown of his devil's countenance was turn'ng

"The tobacco ! " I told myself, and, even with the thought, the fated wretch guiped down the remnant of the plug But he - as dangerous still; so, turning towards the barometer, I stretched out an arm over it and recited a verse or two of something-I forget what. Silence, then, for half-aminute-broken only by the poisoned man's elephantine guspings.

"The spirit "-I began, and turned-barely in time to duck beneath the tremendous swing with which the club knocked Ponderiohn's choicest beetle-case to flinders, and nearly shook the house down as it landed like a round-shot upon one of the marble-wood posts. Eight feet away I jumped, and jerked he pistol out. But it wasn't needed -the effect had finished Tomora. Twisting and groaning, he lay on the firor-wetted already with the sweat that poured from every inch of his agonised carcase.

I made the door fast, pocketed the pistol again. stooped over the enemy, and deliberately wrenched him by the nose-sispped him hard in the fice-kicked him energetically in the ribs! Not out of petty revenge, but to make sure that he really was in the state of indifference to contingencies characteristic of nercoto-irritent polanning. Then I li' my nipe, and constituted myself an Executive Council of One. This man had esten a 40s. plug of about the s'rongest tobseco in the world. His death-probable in any case-was certain if he were left to himself. Should I use, on his behalf, what medical knowledge I possessed?

"No!" I repeated, as I looked up at the saucers-haped dent of the club upon the massive housepost. " Better not give him the chance of repeating that little experiment | Let the lawwhich is to say the tobacco-take its course in Voices-many voices-outside. I opened the door. There was a small crowd around it-| thbering and hustling each other as is this people's way. Not all, though. One old man, shorter than the others, and lighter of colour, stood gravely forward as spokesman. He had made the Macassay voyage, were a kris, and spoke the Bugis Malay intelligibly enough.

"Tomora was lost! The people were afraid Had the white master seen the great chici whose name was Tumora Diré?"

The "white master " brought him in, closed the door, and pointed to the deplorable object upon the floor. "Tumora had angered the Weather-Spirit of the white men, and the Spirit had turned his blood into water in

" Abai Indas / " and the old man sbrunk away towards the door. "It is even so! Wise are the white men! Great is their Spirit! Let thy servant go, lest he also "-

I threw open the door, and waited while he explained in the Dine tongue. In half-a-minute there wasn't a mop-head in sight-save one-a pearly black man, who surlly stood his ground. Tattooed from wrist to elbow in brilliant scarlet. he swung carelessly to and fro the short, cauliflower-headed club of the Aru Islands. There were Aru-men in Dine, I knew-fellows with more grit than the Dine-men, or less superstition. This man also I invited inside, and, still sulkily

It not only gives strength and increases the flesh, but heals the initation of the throat and lungs.
